Description

The safety label safe-it serves as a tamper-evident seal and protection against manipulation, e.g. of samples, retained samples, during sample transport, sealing of containers in the laboratory containing important or hazardous chemicals, as well as for sealing letters, consignments of goods and much more. With the tamper-evident seal, the initial opening of a package is made clearly and irrevocably visible, and unlawful opening can thus be proven. If the security label is removed again, it separates into individual layers. A previously hidden pattern irreversibly appears on the surface and the adhesive leaves a non-removable residue on the substrate (so-called void label). Once the label has been removed, it cannot be reapplied. Thus, relabeling or subsequent changes are not possible. When the safe-it security seal is removed, a silver checkerboard pattern appears, both on the background and on the surface of the label itself. With checkerboard pattern Visible tamper evidence
